Collaborators and Conflicts of Interest [if there is no COI, declare that explicitly]

Please make sure to include all collaborators, e.g. anyone you may need to share data with, and all potential conflicts of interest (COI). Declaring a potential COI does not disqualify you from data access. We require that you declare any financial or non-financial COI and describe its nature. The Data Quarry Governing Board will decide whether this represents a meaningful conflict. If the Board determines there is a meaningful COI, the decision to release the dataset will return to the dataset owner. See below for a definition of financial and non-financial conflicts of interest.

Conflict of Interest Definitions

A financial conflict of interest is defined as:

- People working as employees, directors, officers or Board members at: ERW suppliers, MRV providers, carbon removal buyers or making ERW-based carbon credit purchasing decisions, OR people deriving more than 20% of their income from such companies
- Anyone who owns an equity stake of any size or options in a company working in the ERW space
- Anyone who has a revenue-linked compensation agreement with a for-profit company working in the ERW space

Scientists who are paid or unpaid advisors to ERW companies, but who a) retain their University affiliations and salaries, b) do not hold equity or options in the companies they advise, c) do not have revenue-linked compensation agreement with the companies they advise and d) do not derive more than 20% of their income from companies operating in the ERW ecosystem are not considered to have a financial conflict of interest.

Non-financial conflicts of interest could include: A person's domestic partner or immediate family member having a direct financial conflict of interest as defined above, a researcher receiving substantial non-financial benefits (e.g. lab space, equipment time, etc) from an ERW company, etc. Please use your judgement in sharing relevant potential conflicts.
